Independent Living Skills

This document is designed to give parents guidance on skills to teach children before they leave home. This is not an exhaustive list, nor is it a list that will fit every parent or child. Skills below are divided into chores and basic life skills. If you would like guidance on boundaries with technology look at the “Family Technology Plan” document. If you would like a more thorough list, please refer to the list from Focus on the Family. Depending on your lifestyle, some of the living skills may be more appropriate for your child than others. It is also likely that as a parent, you may not have all the skills below. That is okay. As culture, technology, and interests change, so will the need to learn/teach some of the skills below. Please feel free to add specific skills that fit your family which may not be listed below. The goal is to help train your child to mature into a healthy, independent adult. As your child gets older, you may also want to ask your child for suggestions of what he/she would like to learn before leaving home.
